Bcap study guide 2019 free printable free

I just took it yesterday. If you can't focus and feel you're bored, at least look at tables and try to study those. I'm taking it this weekend and I'm just a bag of nerves. This might require you to organize them, review all of the important points and re-read portions of the textbook. I was like there is no way I will be able to wait two months for the results, but eventually (days later) I stopped thinking about it. There's actually a wealth of flashcards on there already that you can use to quiz yourself for both BCPS and BCACP. Must be done on letterhead from your employer. Cramming might seem appealing, but it can be stressful and not as effective as a thought-out schedule. A LOT of information though. I've now accepted the fact that the test HAS to be as random as it was...even though I felt like my particular test had a 'theme', but I've heard others had different 'themes'. I pivoted and started using HYMR as my main source of studying. Was thinking of making a study group? It also allows you to study smarter, and gives you more confidence when it comes time to take the exam! It is not to early to start preparing! If you are looking for further premium materials to help your BCACP preparation, you can find more information about our 6 month and 12 month BCACP all access pass (save $100 versus buying two 6 month access periods). I need another couple days to get HR to sign documents for me. I took exam 1 but can't quite gauge how I did... The lectures are somewhat information overload. 4. Hospital inpatient pharmacy 2016-2020. Prob got 1-2 questions wrong on stats if that. Learning the regulations was tough. I used High Yield Med Review and ACCP....I bought the ACCP 2019 materials and tried to start studying in July 2019, but the material was so in depth, and I was so busy that I kept putting it off and never picked up the study materials again until January of this year. I wasn't going to post because I have been an onlooker on this site throughout my time studying, but it was helpful to see others' testimonies and I wanted to pay it forward. In any case, I am retaking it this Spring and hope I pass. I skipped oncology and skimmed pediatrics (neither of which I have experience with). Make sure to remember and understand biostat like your name. Final thoughts: You will never feel prepared going into this test. A few things... It's my second time taking it but this time I honestly feel like I didn't do better despite studying a lot more. I was leaning towards taking it in the fall to give myself more time. The questions are awesome. A burst of exercise can help you clear your head and get motivated for another round of studying. I like Med101 but I don't think it covers a lot in details. Sitting at a desk for hours can be draining, so make sure to space out time for yourself to get up, stretch or even take a short walk. Studied maybe 3 weeks on and off. And most of all, turn off your phone and avoid using the internet for unrelated tasks to maintain your focus.Review Your Notes and TextbookWhen you're getting started with your studying, take a look at the notes you have from class. Passed the BCPS and BCACP. 1. I work in an ambulatory care clinic. I am registering for mid-May. I got 120/175 (68.6%) right, so was wondering how that correlates to the real thing. Then I bought the ACCP mock test. Thank you for your amazing tips and congratulations! I am scheduled for the exam in May of 2021. hope this helps. No problem. This may be a lot for some people, but where one lacked the other picked up the slack in terms of information. Oh gotcha. No matter how much you study. This will help make sure that you are not in over your head. What information do I need to provide you? Registration for fall 2020 is closed but the testing window will be open between September 8, 2020 through October 12, 2020. This mock exam is HIGHLY recommended be the questions asked on it are very very very similar to the actual test. I will say it is difficult to develop a one size fits all study schedule. I DID NOT want to pay for an additional resource, but I'm glad that I used HYMR because things just made more sense! Once I finished lecture topics I would cross reference and read the ACCP lectures and they made much more sense. Again, it's so random. If I fail it again I'll probably never attempt it again I took it in 2021 and am retaking it too for the exact same reason. What did you think of the test? I meant Spring 2021, sorry. I wanted to include this question because I was recently asked it in relation to the content outline. Statistics principles are absolutely included in the content outline and you should prepare for it. We have created an awesome biostats study guide. You can buy it individually or it does come in our 6 month and 12 month BCACP all access packages. Last time around, I only took one practice exam (ACCP) and didn't do any more test prep questions-I just reviewed the ACCP material. You need someone to attest (HR/DOP/etc) that you have worked X number of years doing X% of work related to X subject matter you want your board cert in. Was literally about to sign up this week and it says today is the last day.... Most of the test questions involve biostat one way or another. I'm taking it in Mid May too. I made a Slack group, I would need your email to add you in. I read every word of almost every chapter. With a substantially low pass rate (about 1/3 will fail), you have got to be prepared for this exam if you want to pass. These questions are SUPER difficult, no way the real test is this difficult. No, I haven't taken the MedEd101 exam yet. Hi! I am interested in joining the study group. Thank you for sharing your experience. While your studying strategies may evolve as you progress in your educational career, here are basic tips and advice to help you get the most out of your study sessions.Set Up Your Study SpaceOne of the effective ways to make the most out of your study sessions is to have it set up properly. And if there is explanation, read it and know why the wrong answer is wrong. Looking to form study group or is there one already. Highly recommend to get it for the biostat, regulatory packets, and two practice test, the questions on the mock exam and the study material are very difficult but it will prepare you for the real exam. I learned biostats like my life depended on it. I took BCPS 13 years after graduation and well after I stopped practicing in a traditional setting. I wonder if I should buy ACCP or High yields? I use GroupMe. I can make a group there. I am interested in joining the study group Members don't see this ad :) I just bought the ACCP 2021 mock exam and took it. I have heard of pharmacists taking only a month or two to study. That is a little too close for comfort for me, but maybe you like to live dangerously! Ideally, I would review the concepts and start looking at the material at about 6 months from your BCACP exam date. Maybe you don't need to start hardcore studying until 3 months, but developing your BCACP study schedule and gameplan at the 6-month mark would be ideal. It is valuable. I bought the med101 regulatory guide the morning of the exam actually, haha.... Does anyone here live in NY tri-state area? Planning on buying the ACCP exams too. This is WAYYYY tougher than the NAPLEX. So I don't know how to feel about this... I took the first one but cant tell what it exactly means since I have nothing to gauge it by Yesh sure, will probably take in end of feb. It also allows documentation for how much time you would like to spend on a topic. Personally, I didn't find that the material in the books generally changed too much to justify waiting till May to get the study materials. Lab values were not provided on my exam, so I would know common labs. me too, failed in the fall 2021 season and now retaking. You and I are in the same boat. PM me your ID if interested. Also I would recommend reading the biostat chapter in the AACCP book. If there is a lot of content to wade through, consider reviewing your notes before and after class, to keep the information fresh in your mind.Also, if you're studying for a test, make sure to have any notes in front of you about what subjects and topics are expected to be on the test. This will help keep you on task and make sure that you aren't too focused on one or two topic areas. Didn't find a thread for Spring 2022 so figured I'd make one. I only see the ACCP Pharmacotherapy Mock Exam on the website. Do you think I am behind? what's your email - I am part of a bcps study group as well, if you want, I can add you. Be Accountable Our study schedule also allows for accountability. It allows you to fill in how much time you have spent on a given topic. I too think the lectures on HYMR is a bit "too much." As a FT mom and a FT pharmacist, I don't really have time for a 60 minute lecture on Aspirin, also, may I ask if I am supposed to memorize the commonly used equations and risk scores like Cockcroft-Gault or Chadvacs? High Yield. I ALWAYS recommend the quiz bank. If you work in the VA. 2. I depend too much on MDcalc in my daily practice thank in advance Page 2 I am taking it for the first time in mid May. So of course once the exam day came, I completely froze. How do you purchase the ACCP BCOP mock exam? At a minimum, I do believe that the BCACP Study Schedule can help keep you on task. It's a way to collaborate with others, ask questions and help others with things they may be struggling with. You need someone to attest (HR/DOP/etc) that you have worked X number of years doing X% of work related to X subject matter you want your board cert in. How did you manage to retain material over months? Made me feel depressed but I thought I would take my chance. You said spring 2020 but referenced fall 2020. Are you willing to sell your prep book and study books if they are 2019 and newer? I hope you find the free download helpful! Here are my thoughts: I passed BCPS with a score of 541 from first try. I plan to do BCCP next year and stat to look for materials. VA lectures. I only used the ACCP materials in case anyone is wondering. Here's what I did. Thanks Hi guys, thanks for sharing your thoughts on BCPS. HYMR was definitely better than ACCP for statistics. I wish I would have used that feature of the exam more often actually! The exam should provide a calculator for calculations as well as some sort of space for writing notes (mini whiteboard, scratch paper, etc.). Especially since many of us are working, it helps to memorize things through repetition during breaks or slow times while working. I forget by the time I revisit it again. That's what I was told, and it was consistent with my test a few years ago. Didn't really read through the chapters bc some of them missed necessary topics and others had just so much information. Gonna focus more on biostats and reg material. Will let you know. Got a 64%. I took the first one but cant tell what it exactly means since I have nothing to gauge it by Members don't see this ad :) Mind telling me how you do on the MedEd101 exam when you take? Last edited: Jan 18, 2022 I'm taking it in Mid May too. I do have a referral code and a discount so if you need it message me! 2. As far as the attestation letter goes, you should ask your director first if you haven't done that already before going to HR. Good luck to everyone take the test this fall and let me know if you have any questions. A few questions/advice I am looking for: Is it worth rushing to review and learn all the material before the spring window ends? I didn't take the whole 30 minute break. Will also take a few practice exams. I actually made a channel on Slack. I think I would need your email to add you in. The biostat packet was life saving for me. I was VERY VERY confident in my stats because of high yield stats and the quizbank for stats. btw what documents does HR have to sign in order for you to sign up for the exam? However, BCPS is more likely to test you on established fact than an obscure brand new change. Planning to take the exam early May Members don't see this ad :) That's SOOO close!! What do you feel like you could have done differently? You may think you have 200 hours or maybe some of you have only 50. I am willing to buy your study materials. I want to take BCGP this fall. Was not too far off though. Anyone else taking it? The biostats/regulatory were my strongest domains surprisingly enough. What source you used for bio-stats? I thought it was a good mix of really hard questions and some that were ridiculously easy. I started to panic for the regulatory section right before the exam, but I think ACCP & HYMR did a great job of covering these sections. I started studying for my exams 6 months prior. Major mistake for me and I for sure learned my lesson Hello everyone! Future BCPS hopeful here that would like to join any study groups available. Anyways, congratulations on passing your exam! I wish I will pass too Anyone know details of when the spring 2020 BCPS testing window opens? It's not like I didn't realize how long it would be...but I just was mentally fatigued. I should have. I've been following this thread from the very start. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET A few months ago, we produced a study schedule for the BCPS exam and one for those seeking BCGP certification. Some of you who are looking for Ambulatory Care study help have spoken up which is greatly appreciated! Many of you have asked for a BCACP study schedule. I HIGHLY recommend this. How to Use the Meded101 BCACP Study Schedule Our BCACP study schedule is not a schedule per se but is intended to help you target which areas you need to study most. It allows you to do that by letting you document how many hours you'd like to study each topic. There is a significant chunk of regulatory, ambulatory care practice nuggets, billing codes, statistics, and other "non-medication" related topics that you have to prepare for. You can see that I strongly encourage dedicating the majority of your study time for those topics in comparison to a specific disease system (i.e. GI, Cardiology, etc.). We've estimated approximately 100 hours of study time. I think that is a solid amount. The problem I am having is that since it's a huge amount of material, I do not get to review a lot. I practiced for 3 years including 1 year of PGY1. I felt confident about some questions but then had doubts about other questions. Listen to them!! Are the high yield questions reflective of the questions on the BCPS? I'm planning to buy ACCP practice exam too. I honestly felt I passed coming out of the test just because I felt comfortable about biostat portion of it. Will also be supplementing with the ACCP book as well. Awesome! Count me in. What/how are you studying? I have been studying for BCPS on and off for almost 7 months while being a full time mom and having a full time job. If you struggle with stats get the stats set. Anyone know how the meded101 exam correlates to the actual exam? Purchased MedEd101 six months course. Did you want to take the exam this year or spring 2021? I was wondering how you did if you dont mind saying? Thanks, Pham!!! Matt Hello everyone! Future BCPS hopeful here that would like to join any study groups available. Awesome! Count me in. I have a managed care background (did a managed care residency, worked at a health plan, worked at a PBM), so this exam was a personal challenge/goal of mine. As part of your BCACP study schedule, I would strongly encourage targeting at least 3 months out to start looking over the material. Can't emphasize that enough. I also used HYMR and ACCP booklet and the Mock Exam. Just do a quick search. Here's what I did: 1. Teaching the material to classmates can be an effective tool to gaining thorough understanding of the topics.Take BreaksWhile studying is important, so is taking breaks. about me: graduated pharmacy school in 2016. Covered by the ASHP/ACCP material (i.e. doesn't discuss IRBs, drug approvals etc.) what materials are you guys using for this? Members don't see this ad :) Hey SDN: I passed BCPS. Creating a study schedule with the exam date in mind helps you pace your studying, and gives you time to ask questions before the test.Start or Join a Study GroupIf you work well in a group setting, consider starting or joining a study group. I got mine from my director and he had a template already made for other employees he made letters for so it was like an hour turnaround time. To be exact 49.8%. Best of luck to anyone thinking about taking the exam! You can do it if you're serious about it (or insanely knowledgeable). It's just the way it is. Maybe I went in with a losing frame of mind. Took the ASHP practice test. If anything get the quiz bank. This is not a post about what I saw on the actual exam but what I did to prepare. Anyone who is interested in sharing resources, let me know. I believe the future exams will have less regulatory questions...not sure. If you feel that you don't have a strong ambulatory care clinical background, taking a few hours to develop a gameplan 9-12 months out would be appropriate. According to them average is a 64.45%. I am more than happy to help. But again...the super hard questions will prepare you for the actual exam. For obscure diseases or third/fourth line agents I either skipped or just went over once. I know of a significant number of pharmacists who do look out that far ahead. Definitely take a look at the BCACP content outline @ the BPS website prior to developing your study schedule. Just work. I meant Spring 2021, sorry. Finally I bought some flash cards for my phone on an app. Some pharmacists have more time per day than others. Do I Have to Know Statistics for the BCACP Exam? I read through the book once and but because it is soo much information you really just need to make notes or quizlet cards with the key points. Review the chapters for the topics you feel uncomfortable with. Any pre-made Anki decks you can recommend? Maybe a little fear of the unknown perhaps? Thanks, Pham!!! Matt Hi Matt, I think there's no rush. 3. I felt very confident after the exam about the stats questions, and I had high scores on practice exams for the stats section. BCACP Study Schedule Time Log FinalDownload How Long Should I Prepare? Out of curiosity, have you taken the MedEd101 exam yet? The stats lectures are AMAZING. Do questions, questions, and more questions. This helps you focus on the areas that you need to review the most.Create a Study ScheduleIf you're studying for a big test or exam, don't plan on doing all of the studying last-minute. I wanted to give big thanks to each one of you and finally decided to become a member to share my experience. 4. Was going to also purchase the MedEd101 regulatory and biostats guides. I did not buy the video lectures just the pdf. I remember thinking that one of their questions had two answers but one of the answers was misleading, so I left a comment on the particular question. Taylor Study Time to Your Weaknesses While it can be incredibly helpful in real life to be an expert at one topic, the BCACP exam covers a broad range of topics. If you work in a warfarin clinic, you will likely have no trouble with DVT/PE, AFib, and all the anticoagulant questions. I would not spend a lot of time on these topics as you need to shore up your weaknesses to ensure you pass. Doing an initial practice exam has been a strategy for me to help identify those areas of weakness. Our BCACP Study Schedule allows for an area to document how many hours you want to study on a topic. We have also allowed an area for you to take additional notes so you know if you need to come back to an area and review prior to the exam. the lectures are fantastic. BPS also gives the opportunity for you to give feedback on questions. Yes. I now realize that was an error. there are so many i just learned as much of the major/ important rules as I could. Next time I'll go outside and walk around. Starting to look over materials now. I read the explanations and memorized as much from it. Mix of staffing/ clinical stuff. I am using ACCP. I take it in a few days The only reason I'm taking it again this time is because it's 1/2 price. Mind telling me how you do on the MedEd101 exam when you take it? Halfway through studying the Cardiology lectures, I realized I needed a better study method or resource because I was always referencing other text to understand foundational information that ACCP would skip. I memorized everything with major disease states: HTN, HF, DM, common infections, depression, etc. I will explain how to use our BCACP study schedule in this post. If you are just here for the free download and would like to get on your way, find the link here. There are many of them out there. Congrats on your board certification! And thanks for sharing your experience! how long in advance you recommend to take the mock test? Hi. I am taking naplex in mid June. i would also like to join the study group. My email is I am a 2018 grad working in an inpatient hospital setting with some clinical tasks. Reading your stories definitely motivated me! Like everyone said, you will not feel like you aced the exam leaving out!! The first two days I did nothing but think about the exam and the questions I was unsure about. I took the exam in Fall 2021 but unfortunately failed. I heard great reviews from people who used it, and they also have a money back guarantee as long as you complete the learning lectures and test questions (read the rules). If you're a student, regardless of your age, solid studying habits can help you succeed. It is always possible that it does significantly change. Does anyone take a look at BCCP materials on High Yield? I'm a "why person" I need to know why foundational things function the way they are, and then it is easier for me to understand. I felt like I rushed at the end because I was, quite frankly, tired of taking the dang exam. I wanted to share what I did to prepare. Will also be my 2nd time and I studied a lot more... The same way you had to know calc to pass Naplex. Thank you for the info. How much time did you spend on pharmacokinetics and how many questions in real exam was from it? Quizlet. no residency, where did you buy flash cards from Hi. Congratulation on anyone who passed. What about you? The book is good. My advice: 1. I am using the ACCP book + ACCP book for biostats + High Yields question bank + Meded101 exams. If anyone is interested, we can form a study group and keep in touch with each other. Also, it's advisable to prepare basic snacks and water so you can stay nourished while you study. Barely got 60 on it. Keeping a tidy desk means that you'll have enough space to lay out all the papers and books you need, without dealing with distractions or clutter from other classes or assignments. Here are my thoughts: I passed BCPS with a score of 541 from first try. Monitoring for key meds, CI etc. Dz states, first, second, third line therapy. Hope I pass. Listen to them!! I have a managed care background (did a managed care residency, worked at a health plan, worked at a PBM), so this exam was a personal challenge/goal of mine.
